The earth we abuse and the living things we kill will, in the end, take their revenge; for in exploiting their presence. We are diminishing our future.

– Marya Mannes

Marya Mannes (14 November 1904 – 13 September 1990) was a 20th-century American author and critic. She wrote under the pen name of, "Sec." Mannes lived most of her life in New York City, where she was born. Her brother was musician Leopold Mannes. Her parents, Clara (Damrosch) and David Mannes, founded the Mannes College of Music in New York. Her maternal grandfather was conductor Leopold Damrosch, and her maternal uncles were conductors Walter Damrosch and Frank Damrosch. Her father was Jewish; her mother was from a Lutheran German family. Mannes was an editor at Vogue and later wrote prolifically for the magazines The Reporter and The New Yorker. Mannes published a number of books of essays, sharply and wittily critical of American society. She was a much-sought-after social commentator on radio and television. She hosted her own 13-week television show on New York's WNEW-TV in 1959, I Speak for Myself. Mannes had one child who survived her when She died in San Francisco, California.
